INTERNET ADDICTION AND ITS EFFECTS ON STUDENT BEHAVIOUR -- A FUZZY ANALYSIS

W.B. Vasantha Kandasamy and Mary John

Today's biggest hazard faced in the life of student community at large is the evil effects of the Internet. When we the term behaviour we are using it only as attribute. Any sort of addictions in a student's life, a certain impediment to improvement in any form. When a survey was made by visiting cyber café as customer the following the facts were observed. First the cyber cafes “100% privacy” anyone can be sure that intellectual pursuit or researching for study material by a student needs no privacy. Secondly the key words in all these cafes is the fact the customer is the king. So these two securities for the students have lead to do evil in a most conductive atmosphere. Most of them come to the cyber café or Internet parlour informing their parents that they had to send e-mail or for chatting but in reality they did either busy over surfing the photographic sites. The proof is seen from the exponential increase from cyber cafes. It is because of high rates of addictions of student’s community to porn sites that have made people like Doctor Prakash millionaires. Also this very increase in addiction among the students causes several more perverted minds and produces more people like Doctor Prakash who further accelerate the decay in moral values. Police say putting conditions on these Internet cafes is like wild goose chase. Parents and teachers must accept their helplessness. Here we use fuzzy analysis and derive the following conclusions - The student’s behaviour changes with poor performance in studies, looks as if under hypnotic spell or dream fantasy world, eye-ailment increase in eve-teasing drug abuse, sadomasochism, crime against female children, involving rape and degrades the marriage relationship. It also increase the condemnable activities like stealing and misusing money and above all violence, The study suggests that as Government cannot make any law to prevent it. This can however be stopped by Religious groups, Educators, Public Administrators, Youth themselves and the public. For example, the public can stop such cafes from existing in their locality if abuses of the Internet are sensed.
