In this paper we study the problems faced by school going disabled rural children. Their problems include starting from home, reaching the school on time, problems in class room, ill treatment by their classmates and teachers; the support they get from their parents and other personal problems are analysed using Fuzzy Cognitive Maps (FCMs). A pilot survey of 25 rural students studying in 8th to 10th standard is used in this analysis.